Andrew regularly flies to Kalongo bringing staff, medical teams or equipment for the hospital. The MAF flight takes just one and half hours. A few weeks ago, Andrew, Ben, Joel and I drove from Kampala to Kalongo. In contrast to the MAF flight, our car journey took 9 and half hours! We arrived tired and ready for our beds in a local guesthouse. What a difference a MAF flight can make!

Family News

The day after our visit to Kalongo, Andrew, the boys and I drove further north to Kidepo National Park. This stunning national park is promoted as “The True African Wilderness”. It truly lives up to its name! These vast plains host a variety of African wildlife and provide a sense of space and nature that is hard to find when living in a crowded city. It was wonderful to look out over the open plains and see the semi-arid landscape stretching into the distance and merging with Kenya and South Sudan.

Ben, Joel and I visited a Karamajong village in this region, as part of a community tourism project. Since my mum lived and worked among the Karamajong people during her years in Uganda in the 1960s, I was keen to get a glimpse of Karamajong culture. We were welcomed and taken to visit one of the homes and to watch the processes still used in village life for grinding grain and threshing local crops.

I found myself growing emotional as we watched the Karamajong singing and dancing. The scene was reminiscent of so many described by my mum when she lived and worked in this region- a region she still prays for and holds dear in her heart over half a century later.

After Easter, we had a special treat when Esther joined us for nine days! This was a highlight. She has now returned to England, where her brother Ben will soon be based. Ben finishes school in June and is busy preparing for his final few weeks of school and his exit from Uganda!

Thank You

Thank you again for all of your prayers, generosity and support. It means the world to us.

This Easter, we were invited to reflect on the difference that the Easter message makes. In the gospel accounts we see the resurrection of Jesus bringing JOY, relief, HOPE, PEACE, understanding and a sense of purpose to early disciples, according to their individual needs. We live thousands of years later, but the message of Easter has the same relevance today. As we look to our risen Jesus, may He continue to make the difference we need in our day to day situations. If you'd like to listen, here is link to a great song on this theme: This Changes Everything.

We send you our thanks, love and warm greetings from Uganda,

Liz, Andrew, Ben and Joel :-) :-) :-) :-) XX
